

The spirit of sport is really the essence and ideal of all our human efforts. It is the exercising and joining of our individual energy with those of others in furthering the human race. Thus, competition strikes me as being for one another, and not against. I see it as participation, and unusual teamwork. Each contribution of spiritual and physical vitality establishes new plateaus from which others may thrust. It is a shared current: it is important to play well.

...and the end to all our exploring will be to arrive where we started and know the place for the first time.

T.S. Eliot

No man is an island entire of itself; every man is a piece of the continent, a part of the main: if a clod be washed away by the sea, Europe is the less, as well as if a promontory were, as well as any manner of thy friends or of thine own were: any man's death diminishes me, because I am involved in mankind. And therefore never send to know for whom the bell tolls: it tolls for thee.

John Donne
